

Please do not allow companies to weaken Indiana's telephone privacy law. I had Fifth Third Bank (I'm not a customer of theirs) call me 5 times over a period of 7 days trying to reach a customer of theirs that had used to have my new phone number (which I've had for 2 months at the time. They would not take no for an answer that I was not their person, I did not know their person and DO NOT CALL AGAIN. I finally told them that I had a written record going by Vonage phone company to prove the harrassment and I will sue for my time plus legal fees. They quit after that warning. I would hate to think of the phone calls I would get if these companies can get to impose the federal "established business relationship" exemption. Please do not let that happen. Some of us work odd hours and have to sleep during "normal" business hours.
